This is a free demo.COLLINGWOOD will send star defender Tom Langdon back to the track in Friday night's qualifying final against West Coast. The 24-year-old did some limited running on the track at Holden Centre on Monday, but will be without Carlton's Sam Docherty, who is battling a hamstring injury. Docherty underwent scans on his hamstring on Monday, and is expected to return after the CFA final on July 1. Langdon was a star in the Magpies' defence through the second half of the season, but had surgery to repair a ruptured anterior cruciate ligament (ACL) in May.

The ruckman is one of Collingwood's most valuable assets, and former skipper Scott Pendlebury is wary of where Langdon would slot in were he to be out. "Tom would be really important," Pendlebury said on 3AW on Monday. "I think Collingwood's defence has really fallen over since he went down. "Who does he slot into? That's the question that everyone is asking." Langdon was recovering well after the procedure, and was on track to play for the Magpies' first final since 2012, and was a firm favourite to make the side. Tom Langdon's absence in the finals could have a negative impact on the Magpies' hopes of retaining the premiership. Picture: AFL Photos "He's been working really well," Pendlebury
