AutoData 3.17 [PL] .Q: Creating a whitespace-separated value from a list of vectors I'm generating a random number of vectors as follows: > nb.vir = replicate(100, runif(4), simplify = FALSE) > nb.vir = strsplit(nb.vir, " ") Now, I want to generate a random list of length nb.vir that includes the same number of (whitespace-separated) vectors as nb.vir. I can't figure out how to do this. When I try: `> ind.list = rep(1:nb.vir, each=5)` it gives back a list of length nb.vir, of which there are twice as many vectors in a 5-vector batch as in the random batch. Why? A: This is one way to do it (assuming you have a space-separated list).

set.seed(100) # for reproducibility nb.vir = 5 ind.list = rep(1:nb.vir, each=5) # Find the number of vectors in each 5-vector batch ind.vec = sapply(ind.list, function(x) length(unlist(strsplit(x, " ")))) ind.vec #[1] 1 5 10 15 20 # Get back a space-separated list of the same size as nb.vir ind.list = paste(ind.list, collapse = " ") length(ind.list)
[1] 16

It will give the same result over and over if you remove the `set.seed()`. A: I think that this code will give you what you want:

nb.

This is a self-guided tour of some of the sites that have featured in the BBC series War and Peace. It is designed to be of use to anyone interested in the history of Tashkent, Sretensky Bor, Tsaritsyn and other sites in the vicinity of the city, and who wants to get under the skin of the relations between East and West during the 18th century. It includes the full range of locations and activities described in the book, as well as a number of other sites not otherwise featured, such as Uzbek businessman and composer Yakov Hemel's music conservatory, which doubled as his home. It is also possible to visit the house he built in the countryside outside the city, where, among other things, he kept his beloved horse. The tour is entirely self-guided. It consists of nine parts, each illustrated with a map and corresponding page in the text. These may be read in any order. The tour starts and ends in Tashkent, and takes in the sites of considerable interest to the story.

The timings are not necessarily chronological, but take in a lot of the places that feature in the story. In some cases, the text gives the gist of what happened at the site, whilst a few pages describe the visit in more detail. In others, the text accompanies visits to important sites, and in still others, it is simply the best description of the site and background available, or, in some cases, it is a description by the people who actually did the work at the place. We certainly can't do justice to all the intriguing locations that feature in the story, and there are plenty of places we haven't even touched on, but we hope you can find the places you're most interested in and spend some time there. We have tried to keep the tour as accessible as possible, in the sense that whilst all the sites are visited, some are visited in more detail than others. Some of the places are famous, but some are not, so if you want to know more about a particular place, do look up the text and map on your own. 0cc13bf012
