Oh, and I'm sarcastic... a lot. Tuesday, August 2, 2011 A Debate Between Two Fathers of Conservative Mediocrity The occasion for the debate: Conservatives like to complain about the liberal media, and (more importantly, on the right) about how liberals would never spend money on anything. Meanwhile, Liberal Media spends billions on outfitting its people in the latest hats, slacks, and sneakers, not to mention those fancy cars and two-week vacations. Conservatives seem to have an unquenchable thirst for complaining, even when they have no idea what to complain about. In other words, you can see why Republicans actually eat up the daytime television programs. The debate: Carlton and Kyle. Carlton is very wealthy, Kyle is also wealthy but less so. Their exchange: [The Belmont Edition thanks our generous sponsors, Barak and Friends, the National Coming Out Day Fund, and The Ladies of the Chutzpah Awards. We are also grateful to The University of Phoenix, Inc., for providing our Red/White tailgating show and catering, and to Colonel Oats and the laundry folding crew for their help in making the show go as it should.] Kyle begins: "You know, Carlton, I don't know if you've noticed, but we conservatives have started to gain ground with the American people, and
