Violence against pregnant women in the context of health facilities and gender inequalities. to analyze violence against pregnant women in the context of health facilities and investigate whether there is a relationship between gender violence and health inequalities. a cross-sectional study was carried out between March and May, 2008, with a sample of 204 pregnant women. Data were collected through a structured interview and by observation in the waiting rooms, bathrooms, examination rooms and medical records. The majority of the pregnant women were aged 22 to 35 years, had a low level of schooling and lived in São Paulo; they showed a preference for a caesarean delivery; their partners were predominantly male and were from the higher socioeconomic strata; their desire for a pregnancy was triggered by a partner's infidelity. Women reported some form of gender violence (sexual, physical and verbal). The most frequent context was the partner's home, and the main forms were physical (95.7%) and sexual (87.2%) violence. The occurrence of violence was associated with low educational level, the type of pregnancy (first or fourth pregnancy), partner's socioeconomic level, partner's age, total length of the relationship and desire for pregnancy. the findings indicated that violence against pregnant women occurred at the health facility, which brought about serious problems, such as fear of a pregnancy, PTSD and a loss of the sense of security that is the center of all health services. This violence is linked to the patriarchal aspect that leads to the occurrence of gender
